The worthy President of the Convention might be one, and we could not spare so valuable a spoke from the wheel of Democracy!

They might burn his property, might take him to the block-he would ascend the scaffold with a firm step-but in dehance of them all he would express his opinions on matters relative to the good of the country. He was charged with being a secessionist, because, forsooth, he was not an Abolitionist. The standard by which the Republicans judged a man was this: If you were a friend of Old Abe and his Ad. happiness of the people. ministration you were a good Union man, but it you sought to maintain the Constitution and the Union, you were a secessionist. The Southern men were much to blame in this controversy. They had done many things which had tended to bring upon the country this dire calamity. But the blame did not all rest with them. The ground taken by the Abolition party of the North was the corner stone of all our difficulties. If they had let this slavery question alone the sun would today have risen on a tree, prosperous and united people. This party, last winter in Congress, could have settled our difficulties if they had been disposed. They weighed the Chicago platform and the Union one against the other, and concluled to take the Chicago platform and let the

The capture of Mason and Slidell had been in dorsed by the Republicans everywhere. Yet in face of this, in face of a solemn vote in Congress indorsing Commander Wilkes, when the British lion roared this miserable, crouching, corrupt Administration quailed-backed down. THURSDAY JANUARY 9

Governor Wright's Eulogy of Douglas. We publish this morning the eulogy of Gov. WRIGHT upon the life and public services of the request of a sommittee appointed at the meeting held in this city in honor of the memory of the deceased statesman immediately after that sad event. The time was most appropriately chosen-the 8th of January-the day that the Hero of New Orleans achieved a proud whom Douglas achieved a proud and deserved ding one officer. forensic triumph. A large and appreciative audience attended last evening to hear a distinguished Indianian do honor to the memory and distinguished public services of the favorite son of

The Convention. The proceedings of the Convention of the Democracy of Indiana held yesterday, occupy so within the State. All the counties were represented but five, notwithstanding the untoward this morning with two days' rations and forty season of the year, and the pecuniary embarrass- rounds of cartridges to each man. ments of the people. Metropolitan Hall was crowded with the solid men of Indiana-the bone and muscle of the State, and hundreds expedition. were turned away on account of the insufficiency of room to accommodate them. It was an occasion of deep interest. The convention was composed of those who felt that a crisis had arrived in our public affairs which demanded the attention of all who desired to maintain the Constitution and Union as framed by the fathers of the Republic, and their patriotic efforts to preserve and continue them unimpaired, if possible, to those who will come after us.

The proceedings show that a remarkable unanimity prevailed in the Convention. It could not be expected, under the present remarkable exigencies of the country and the condition of our publie affairs, that all should think exactly alike as to the best means to be employed to preserve the Legislature of Kentucky, favoring the construc-Government, but the resolutions expressive of the sense of the Convention, which were adopted by an almost unanimous vote, we believe will renance of constitutional liberty, and the restoration of the Union as it was and should be, and Kansas contested sent was taken up, with resoluportant influence in securing these patriotic ob- some discussion the subject was postponed till Lieber, in the Atna Insurance the British while she had on board five officers for the American army. The ship and officers were released by the British Admiral. The officers frankly stated their positions, yet as they were passengers on a neutral ship, which sailed from a neutral port for another neutral port, the proximate destination of the passengers was en> titled as an innocent destination, and they were consequently set at liberty. The Times claims that this case plainly establishes the precedent that between one neutral port and another, all persons and things whatever may be transported. A letter from Hamburg gives an account of a meeting of English merchants there, at which Mr. Wood, British Charge de Affairs, read a paper purporting to be a note to Lord Lyons in regard to the Trent affair. This note was written with great moderation.

It makes no mention of the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown of which so much has been said in the papers, but simply and explicitly characterizes the capture of the Commissioners as an infraction of the law of nations and an in-sult to the English flag. It declares that the Beck, at Vickers's drug store, in Odd Fellows Cabinet, considering the cordial and friendly Hall, repairs watches, clocks and jewelry on short character of the relations existing between England and the United States, can not doubt for an astant that the Captain of the San Jacinto must find him a gentleman deserving of patronage. He then adds that the British Government
